CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of Activity

Fieldwork Practice (PKL) is the application of knowledge acquired in educational institutions by working in places relevant to that field of study (KBBI VI Daring, 2023). Educational institutions generally incorporate this activity into the curriculum to provide students with foundational work experience before entering the real working world. This activity is a graduation requirement for seventh-semester students of the English for Business and Professional Communication Study Program at Politeknik Negeri Jakarta.

This semester, the author carried out Fieldwork Practice at a company named PT Mediamaz Solusindo Nusantara for a full five months. This company provides professional translation services, certified sworn translators, interpreters, and document legalization. The author chose Mediamaz as the Fieldwork Practice location to gain firsthand experience working as a translator under the umbrella of a professional translation service company.

Translation is a practical activity conducted in written or spoken form to convert sentences, expressions, or messages from the source language into the target language. For legal texts, translation requires meticulousness and a broad understanding due to differences in terminology between languages. Even minor errors in interpreting the message of a legal text can have severe consequences for the text's overall meaning, intent, and purpose. Given the complexity of this process, translators need specific training to handle such legal documents effectively.

Legal texts are generally formal documents with legal validity and authority. These texts are not limited to regulations or statutes but also include personal and institutional documents, collectively referred to as personal texts. These documents are often needed not only for domestic purposes but also for international engagements. Therefore, translation practice is essential for conveying messages from personal texts from one language to another.
