ABSTRACT

Utari Nur Cahyani. English for Business and Professional Communication Study Program. Analysis Of Translation Quality on Loss and Gain Information in Government News on The Cabinet Secretariat of The Republic of Indonesia.

This study aims to analyze the occurrence of loss and gain of information based on Bassnett-McGuire's theory and its translation quality in the aspect of accuracy in Government News on The Cabinet Secretariat of The Republic of Indonesia's official website. In addition, this study also analyses the structure sentence changes, based on Chesterman's theory (1997), which is one of the causes of loss and gain. This study uses qualitative descriptive as the method and in three sequence steps; 1) The researcher reads the government news sentence by sentence, 2) identifies the sentences that have loss and gain, and 3) classifies the sentence types. The results of this study are 121 data from 30 government news reports. The finding for loss and gain showed that there were three forms; they are loss of information found in 75 data (60%), gain of information found in 42 data (34%), and loss and gain of information found in 6 data (6%). Meanwhile, structure change showed that from 123 data news sentences analyzed by the researcher, 81 data have changes in sentence structure and it forms 10 patterns. There are also 42 data unchanged in sentence structure (which means that the type of sentence in SL is the same as in TL) and it forms 10 patterns. Thus, the study indicates that the use of loss and gain in news text aims to achieve naturalness in translation. In addition, the use of loss of information also aims to condense information, while gain of information provides additional information from the translator which aims to clarify the translation.

Keywords: Loss and Gain; Sentence Structure Change; Translation Strategy; Translation Quality.

ABSTRAK

Utari Nur Cahyani. Program Studi Bahasa Inggris untuk Komunikasi Bisnis dan Profesional. Analysis Of Translation Quality on Loss and Gain Information in Government News on The Cabinet Secretariat of The Republic of Indonesia.

Penelitian ini bertujuan untuk menganalisis terjadinya penambahan dan pengurangan informasi (loss and gain) berdasarkan teori Bassnett-McGuire dan kualitas penerjemahannya dalam aspek keakuratan pada berita-berita pemerintahan di situs resmi Sekretariat Kabinet Republik Indonesia. Selain itu, penelitian ini juga menganalisis perubahan struktur kalimat berdasarkan teori Chesterman (1997) yang menjadi salah satu penyebab terjadinya loss and gain. Penelitian ini menggunakan metode deskriptif kualitatif dengan tiga tahapan, yaitu: 1) Peneliti membaca berita pemerintah kalimat demi kalimat, 2) mengidentifikasi kalimat yang mengalami loss and gain, 3) mengklasifikasikan jenis-jenis kalimat tersebut. Hasil dari penelitian ini adalah 121 data dari 30 berita pemerintah. Temuan loss and gain information menunjukkan bahwa terdapat tiga bentuk, vaitu pengurangan informasi (loss of information) ditemukan sebanyak 75 data (60%), penambahan informasi (gain of information) ditemukan sebanyak 42 data (34%), dan pengurangan dan penambahan informasi (loss and gain of information) ditemukan sebanyak 6 data (6%). Sementara itu, perubahan struktur menunjukkan bahwa dari 123 data kalimat berita yang dianalisis oleh peneliti, terdapat 81 data yang mengalami perubahan struktur kalimat dan membentuk 10 pola. Terdapat pula 42 data yang tidak mengalami perubahan struktur kalimat (yang berarti jenis kalimat dalam SL sama dengan TL) dan membentuk 10 pola. Dengan demikian, penelitian ini menunjukkan bahwa penggunaan loss and gain dalam teks berita bertujuan untuk mencapai kealamian dalam penerjemahan. Selain itu, penggunaan kehilangan informasi juga bertujuan untuk memadatkan informasi, sedangkan penambahan informasi bertujuan untuk memperjelas hasil terjemahan.

Kata Kunci: Penambahan dan Pengurangan Informasi; Perubahan Struktur Kalimat; Strategi Penerjemahan; Kualitas Terjemahan.

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

1.1.Background of The Study

The translation is defined by Catford (1965) refers to the act of replacing textual content from one language (the source language or SL) with its equivalent in another language (the target language or TL). In essence, translation can be defined as the process of converting one language into another in order to convey the message of the source language. The success of a translation depends on the translator's ability to accurately convey the meaning present in the source language. To achieve this, various factors must be taken into account to ensure that the final translation is accepted and the intended is properly conveyed. Mistakes or inaccuracies in the translation can lead to problems for the translator and other relevant parties, especially when dealing with texts like news articles that require precise communication of information to a broad audience.

The news translation text appears to utilize the free translation technique, as described by Newmark. This technique involves paraphrasing the original content, which may result in a text that is either longer or shorter than the original while maintaining the core information without the original form. Therefore, when translating news, the form and function can be adjusted to suit the targeted audience, as argued by Fuji and Barnard. They suggest that news translation is adapted in terms of its structure and purpose to suit the new context of use. Furthermore, news translation has its unique style and technique to convey information effectively to readers. Although most news translations utilize free translation and possess their style and techniques, the primary goal remains to maintain the overall meaning of the source text. Thus, the translator is expected to adopt a unique language style and meaning in the translation to closely resemble the source language text. Additionally, the translator should be aware of the target reader for the translation. To achieve these objectives, translation strategies are essential in the process of translating news text. These strategies ensure that the results are comprehensible to the reader and meet the quality aspects of accuracy, acceptability, and readability.

Based on Chesterman's theory, the term "strategy" is used in various fields such as psychology, sociology, linguistics, and translation theory, and it has been distinguished from other related concepts like tactics, plans, methods, rules, processes, procedures, and principles. Furthermore, Barathayomi (2012) says that some translation experts use different terms in giving terminology of translation strategies, such as Vinay and Dalbernet (1958), Chesterman (1997) and Baker (1992) mention it as a strategy. Similarly, Hoed (2006) states it as a technique and Newmark (1988) argues it as a procedure. Chesterman (1997) classifies local translation strategies into semantic, syntactic, and pragmatic strategies. The syntactic strategy involves altering the grammatical structure of the target text concerning the source text. Meanwhile, pragmatics strategies typically entail more significant changes from the ST and often incorporate syntactic and/or semantic changes as well. In essence, syntactic strategies change the form, and semantic strategies change the meaning, so pragmatic strategies change the message itself.

Several studies have focused on translation strategies, particularly those related to changes in sentence structure, which fall under Chesterman's (1997) theory of syntactic strategies. Firstly, Andriani and Bram (2021) examined sentence patterns and types in news articles. They collected data from ten BBC news articles published in October 2020, revealing five sentence patterns: S+V, S+LV+SC, S+V+O, S+V+DO+OC, and S+V+IO+DO. They also identified four sentence types: simple, compound, complex, and compound-complex sentences. Secondly, Prihastanti (2014) studied structure shifts in grammatical complexity and voice changes in Frank Baum's "The Marvelous Land of Oz" and its translated version. Although the term "structure shift" is used in this study, both investigations share the concept of analyzing sentences based on their types and assessing whether there are changes in sentence structure, often referred to as structure shifts. Additionally, there is a study by Rasyki et al. (2019) that explores loss and gain in the translation process based on equivalence in bilingual online news text. The researchers used ten online news articles from berita2bahasa.com as their data sources.

After reviewing the previous studies, several research gaps were found, such as (1) the lack of study on the topic of sentence patterns based on sentence types, such as changes in sentence structure from simple sentences to compound sentences. (2) the lack of analysis is one of the causes of sentence type change due to sentence-combining. (3) the addition of research variables that is the accuracy of translation quality. Thus, the three gaps also create novelty for researchers who get the idea to combine both variables in government news texts contained on the official website of the Cabinet Secretary of the Republic of Indonesia. This website was chosen because this is an official website from the government of Indonesia that can be trusted to display actual and factual information. On the government's official website, we can see various information such as government news and the president's speech transcript. On the website, both news and speech transcripts with Indonesian text are translated into English text.

This present study is aimed to describe the use of translation strategies applied in government news. To this purpose, the Bassnett-McGuire theory of loss and gain is used to analyze the concept of "loss" and "gain" of information. This theory shares similarities with one of the subcategories of pragmatic strategies, specifically the information changes, where some information from the source text may be added or omitted. Thus, "loss" and "gain" can be considered as the addition or omission of information. In addition, this study also involves examining the subcategories of syntactic strategies, which pertain to changes in sentence structure based on Chesterman's theory (1997). These changes are related to the types of sentences, including simple, compound, complex, and compound-complex sentences. Both focuses in this study are interconnected, as alterations in sentence structure can influence the information conveyed, leading to either a loss or gain of information. For instance, let's consider the following sentence:

SL: "Tentu sinergi, koordinasi, kerja sama, dan upaya bersama baik pemerintah, kami dalam hal ini regulator di sektor jasa keuangan, maupun bersinergi dengan kementerian/lembaga terkait, termasuk anggota KSSK dengan Kementerian Keuangan, Bank Indonesia, dan LPS. Selain itu, yang lebih penting lagi, seluruh pemangku kepentingan, pelaku usaha, investor, industri jasa keuangan, yang akan menentukan pada gilirannya nanti bahwa tahun 2023 ini pun akan setidaknya sama baiknya—kalaupun tidak lebih baik lagi—dari tahun 2022," ungkapnya.

TL: "[Economic growth in] 2023 will be at least as good—if not better—as 2022," he said, adding that the OJK is set to create synergy, coordinate, cooperate, and make joint efforts with related government institutions, including Ministry of Finance's Financial System Stability Committee (KSSK), central Bank Indonesia, and the Indonesia Deposit Insurance Corporation (LPS). (45/SETKAB-NEWS/16/I/2023/H9-P7) (brown= loss of information, blue=gain of information)

The example sentence above is one of the research data with data number 45 and is news dated January 16, 2023, sourced from the Cabinet Secretariat website. Based on the data example, there are 2 sentences combined into 1 sentence, that is 2 complex sentences into 1 compound-complex sentence. Thus, there is a change in sentence structure based on its type. In addition, in the sentence, there are loss and gain of information marked with brown and blue font. There is a loss of information in TL because one of the clauses in SL is not translated, which is marked in brown font. This loss of information causes the information conveyed to readers in the target language to be incomplete. In fact, in the next sentence, there is also no translation for the clause. In addition, there is also a gain of information marked with blue font. However, the gain of information in this sentence cannot cover the loss of information. This is because the gain of information only provides an additional explanation for the abbreviated words contained in the sentence. As in the additional phrase "Financial System Stability Committee" which serves to explain the abbreviation of the word "KSSK", as well as the additional phrase "Indonesia Deposit Insurance Corporation" which serves to explain the abbreviation of the word "LPS". In addition, there is an additional phrase "Economic growth" at the beginning of the sentence in TL, which serves to explain something that grows better in 2023 compared to 2022 is economic growth. Based on the aforesaid background of the study, the researcher is interested in conducting the study entitled "Analysis of Translation Quality on Loss and Gain Information in Government News Translation on The Cabinet Secretariat of The Republic of Indonesia". The researcher hopes that it will be useful for the researcher herself and also the readers.

1.2. Statement of The Problems

Based on the aforesaid background of the study, the following problem statement is formulated:

- 1. What are the forms of loss and gain of information in the translation of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia?
- 2. What are sentence types and patterns used in the translation of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia?
- 3. What is the level of accuracy of the translation results of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia?

1.3.Objectives of The Study

Based on the statement of the problems, the aim of this research is:

- 1. To identify the form of loss and gain of information in the translation of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia.
- 2. To identify the sentence type and pattern in the translation of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia.
- 3. To identify the level of accuracy of the translation of government news on the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia.

1.4.Limitations of The Study

This present study is aimed to describe the use of translation strategies applied in government news. To this purpose, the Bassnett-McGuire theory of loss and gain is used to analyze the concept of "loss" and "gain" of information. This theory shares similarities with one of the subcategories of pragmatic strategies, specifically the information changes, where some information from the source text may be added or omitted. Thus, "loss" and "gain" can be considered as the addition or omission of information. In addition, this study also involves examining the subcategories of syntactic strategies, which pertain to changes in sentence structure based on Chesterman's theory (1997). These changes are related to the types of sentences, including simple, compound, complex, and compound-complex sentences.

© Hak Cipta milik Politeknik Negeri Jakarta

Both focuses of the study are interconnected, as changes in sentence structure can result in alterations in information, leading to either a loss or gain of information. The data used for this research are sourced from translated government news in Indonesia to English, and obtained from the official website of the Cabinet Secretariat of the Republic of Indonesia. The data covers news from 1st January to 31st March 2023, with approximately 30 news sources selected based on three categories: bilateral cooperation, economy, and president's orders.

1.5. Significances of The Study

This research holds significance for both the researcher and the readers. The researcher aims to identify information loss and gain, analyze sentence types and patterns, and assess the accuracy of the translation outcomes. The study's importance lies in its potential contribution to the advancement of translation studies, particularly for English students researching information loss, gain, and sentence structure changes. Additionally, the findings can serve as a valuable reference for translators to anticipate and address potential inaccuracies in meaning resulting from information loss, gain, and sentence structure changes in translated texts.

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1. Conclusion

The title of this study is Analysis of Translation Quality on Loss and Gain Information in Government News Translation on the Cabinet Secretariat of The Republic of Indonesia. This study focuses on describing the use of translation strategies and translation quality applied in government news. Here are some conclusions that can be concluded by researchers:

5.1.1. The Information Change (Loss and Gain of Information)

Based on the results of the analysis of information change in the translation of government news, it is concluded that:

- 1. Loss of information is the most dominant type of information change. This can happen because news has its techniques and writing style. Similarly, news texts are translated into other languages, which mostly use free translation techniques where the news is only taken as the essence and translated and adapted to the translator's writing style. Thus, in news translation, there must be many differences in techniques and writing styles. However, if the translator continues to do this, it will cause a loss of information. Therefore, in this study, loss of information is the most common data found. In addition, the language difference between ST and TT is also one of the influences of information change.
- 2. Gain of Information is the second most common type of information change. Just like loss of information, gain of information can occur due to language differences, as well as differences in the style and technique of writing and translating news texts. Gain of information aims to add information in a news text either in words, phrases, or clauses that are difficult to translate or have untranslatability. Since the news topic is so broad, rarely used words often have additional information to clarify the meaning of the news so that readers do not misunderstand.

3. So, it can be concluded that with or without sentence combining in the analyzed sentences, loss and gain of information can still be found. However, sentence-combining is one of the factors causing the loss of information. This is due to the merging of two or more sentences into one sentence during the translation process. This aims to condense the information so that the information conveyed is not wordy and to the point. Although there is a good intention to condense information so that readers can understand it more easily, sometimes the excessive sentence-combining makes the information conveyed incomplete so that readers can be missing information. Meanwhile, sentence combining and sentence structure change do not affect the gain of information. So, even if there is no sentence structure change, the gain of information will still exist, because it is additional information from the translator which aims to clarify the translation.

5.1.2. The Sentence Structure Changes

Based on the results of the analysis of sentence structure change in the translation of government news, it is concluded that: Sentence Structure Change in news translation can occur due to several factors namely (1) grammatical differences, (2) word order, (3) sentence length, (4) cultural differences. From that factor described, the sentence structure change in this study tends to be caused by grammatical differences because this study focuses on analysis changes in sentence type. The results of this study found many changes in grammatical structure based on the type of sentence. There are 10 patterns of sentence changes, including the merging of 2 or more sentences into 1 sentence. The most common pattern is the combination of compound and complex sentences into compound-complex sentences. Meanwhile, the combining of 2 simple sentences into compound sentences or complex sentences also occurs a lot in this study. However, sentence structure changes can also occur even if there is no sentence-combining, such as the frequent pattern of Compound-Complex Sentences into Simple Sentences. This usually happens because the information is loss or omitted, resulting in a change in sentence structure.

5.1.3. Translation Quality

In addition, the translation quality analyzed in this study is only the accuracy aspect because the researcher wants to see the accuracy of a translation after having changes in sentence structure and information change. Based on the results, both sentence structure change and information change in this study affect the accuracy of the translation. Of the total 123 data, there are 56 data (45%) included in the accurate parameter, 64 data (52%) included in the less accurate parameter, and 3 data (3%) included in the inaccurate parameter. Thus, the results of this study show that the news category that uses this translation strategy is included in the less accurate category. However, the sentence structure change does not affect the quality of the translation. This is because it is the information change that most affects the accuracy aspect of the translation quality assessment.

5.2. Suggestion

After conducting this research, the researcher suggests, as following:

1. For other Researchers

This research analyzed sentence structure change and information change in bilingual translation. For other researchers who want to analyze structure sentences and information change as the focus of the research, they should conduct their research on another aspect of quality translation like acceptability or readability. In addition, other researchers can classify this type of information change consisting of loss and gain of information into smaller levels such as words, phrases, or clauses. For sentence structure change research, it can be seen from the change of active to passive sentence types, or seen from word order such as the placement of subject, predicate, and object.

2. For the Translator

The translator needs to be more careful in adding/omitting (loss or gain of information) the Source Language into the Target Language. Because the grammatical between the two languages are different. The translator has to consider the grammatical structure of both languages which are related to the process of translation whether it can change the meaning equivalence or not.
