CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of the Research

Social media serves as a versatile platform for self-representation, product promotion, and information sharing, encompassing a wide range of digital tools that engage billions of users globally. Social media, encompassing various online platforms for content creation and promotion, plays a pivotal role in both personal self-representation and digital marketing strategies for companies (Ainiyah, 2018 and Dani & Sukendro, 2023). Social media is an Internet-based technological development that allows users to interact directly in some forms (Putu et al., 2021). It has also become an integral part of personal expression and digital marketing strategies, witnessing significant growth and offering diverse platforms like Facebook and Twitter for content creation, communication, and engagement.

In fact, social media refers to a variety of technologies that facilitate the sharing of ideas and information among their users. In early 2023, 94.8% of users accessed chat and messaging apps and websites, followed closely by social platforms, with 94.6% of users (Dollarhide, 2024). With the immense rise in community websites, a lot of organizations have started to find the best ways to utilize these sites in creating strong relationships and communications with users to enable friendly and close relationships to create online brand communities (Ibrahim and Aljarah, 2018). In this context, social media has an important role in branding a business, person, and company which connects different cultures and languages, especially in promotional content such as Instagram, Twitter, Facebook, Wikipedia, company profiles, taglines, captions, YouTube, products, services and brands where it is able to deliver two-way communication through dialog that allows customers and businesses to communicate with each other through social media forums (Fathurrohman, 2016).

Furthermore, for a company branding business, digital platforms have important roles in promoting the company features, products, services, and ideas. Branding is a crucial asset for companies, signaling the qualities of their products or services and enhancing their image among consumers, while also leveraging the brand's value as a strategic tool to differentiate from competitors, sustain market presence, and attract new clients (Ricardo, et al., 2021). Aaker (2003) underscores the significance of branding for consumers, emphasizing three key benefits: functional aspects tied to product/service quality and functionality, economic considerations encompassing relative advantages in cost and time, and psychological factors rooted in subjective expectations and perceptions influencing consumer satisfaction. In addition, a digital environment, the use of data and analytics can provide valuable information about consumer preferences and needs through platform usage, customer feedback, and market trends, which is useful for developing business strategies, optimizing the user experience, and improving customer satisfaction. Digital platforms allow companies to reach potential consumers from different parts of the world with information and services that are available quickly and easily, allowing them to attract consumers to different markets in the digital era (Maharani & Respati, 2023). One of the digital platforms that is widely used by companies for branding is a website.

Nowadays, having a website is a must for company branding. A website is an interconnected web page that generally contains a collection of information in the form of text data, images, animations, audio, video, or a combination of all of them, which are usually made for personal, organizations, and companies (Yasinta, 2022). A company website has several important functions, including a) increase company visibility and credibility b) a platform to convey information about the company's products and services to potential customers c) as a tool to build the company's image and brand d) increasing target consumers and expanding sales markets e) increase company turnover (Vodea, 2022). Furthermore, the company website must have good translation quality, so that it is easily understood by users globally. However, despite the benefits, there are some problems that can arise if a website does not have good quality translations. (1) inversion of meaning: the expression of meaning of the source language text in another way round. In this case, the target language's intention contradicts that of the source language; (2) addition of meaning: the inclusion of intentions or ideas which are not mentioned or implied in the source language. In the other word, the intention of the source language is broadened; (3) omission of meaning: the exclusion of idea or ideas of the source language in the target language, so that the intention of the source language is not completely transferred; (4) deviation of meaning: the diversion of the intention of the source language to other notions; (5) modification of meaning: the expression of the intention of the source language into an unclear form (Akil, 2007).

Based on what has been explained in the previous paragraph, it is crucial to implement strategies that focus on enhancing context awareness, preserving original meanings, and adapting language styles to effectively convey messages on social media platforms, particularly on company websites. The company website of the Human Initiative company is the object of the research. Human Initiative (HI) is a humanitarian organization with a vision of moving goodness to human dignity. It was founded in Indonesia on December 10, 1999, and implements a Theory of Change (TOC) strategy and focuses on the positive impact of community empowerment programs, child protection programs, disaster management and emergency response as well as infrastructure programs. Human Initiative has branches abroad such as the United States, South Korea, Australia, and many more. Human Initiative has been registered as an NGO in the Notary Deed of Establishment of Foundation No. 9 December 10, 1999, Ministry of Social Affairs of the Republic of Indonesia Registration No. 310/5/PI.02/06/2022, United Nations field “Special Consultative Status with the Economic and Social Council”. The Human Initiative website attracts a diverse audience, including donors, sponsors, and individuals seeking information about the organization's mission and activities. The English version of the website is translated by humans and does not rely on AI translation. Language switch buttons are prominently displayed on the website, allowing users to easily switch between languages. Researcher is interested in studying the website content from an Indonesian to English perspective. There are three languages available on the Human Initiative website, which are Indonesian, English and Arabic. The researcher only chose Indonesian and English because the purpose of this research is to assess the quality of translation from the source language (Indonesian) to the target language (English).

Human Initiative websites have problems related to accuracy, acceptability, and readability. First, to make it clearer, accuracy issues may arise if there are errors in the translation of content from the source language to the target language, which may result in inaccurate information, for example “program preventif untuk menutup peluang terjadinya kekerasan” become “which is a preventive initiative aimed at eliminating opportunities for violence”. It shows that the translation is inaccurate because “menutup” becomes “eliminating” which confuses the reader. Secondly, acceptability becomes an issue if the website content does not consider the cultural values of the target language users. When this happens, it causes discomfort or disapproval from the audience, for example “Sekolah Human Initiative adalah Program pembangunan sekolah untuk anak-anak terdampak bencana agar dapat mengenyam pendidikan formal” become “The Human Initiative School is a program aimed at building schools for children affected by disasters to enable them to access formal education”, it shows that the translation is unacceptable because “mengenyam” becomes “access” which confuses the reader. Third, poor readability can occur if there are errors in grammar, sentence structure, or word choice in the target language. This can reduce the effectiveness of communication and user engagement with website content.

The translation quality is how well a text has been transferred from the original language to the target language while maintaining its meaning, style and communicative purpose. The quality of translation on social media must be excellent because it affects acceptability, accuracy, and readability (Shuttleworth & Cowie, 1997). First, accuracy is the basic principle of translation, so it must be the main focus of the translator. If the accuracy of a translation is very low, it can be questioned whether the results include the translation or not. The intended meaning is not just the form, but the message, the ideas on the SL conveyed to TL. In addition, matching does not imply word-for-word translation or one-on-one correspondence, but focuses more on the whole idea or message (Nababan, 2012). Secondly, the term acceptability refers to whether a translation has been expressed in accordance with the rules, norms and culture that apply in the target language or not, both at the micro level and at the macro level. The concept of acceptability is very important because even if a translation is accurate in terms of content or message, it will be rejected by the target readers if the way it is expressed is against the rules, norms and culture of the target language (Nababan, et al., 2012). Thirdly, readability is the degree of ease in which a piece of writing can be read and understood its meaning. A translated text can be considered to have a high level of readability if the text is easy to read and the reader can catch the message conveyed, regardless of the compatibility of the message with the message contained in the SL text. In other words, the reader acts as a subject that determines the readability of a text (McDonald, S. V., 2020).

Based on those theories, it can be understood that the translation quality and website as a branding medium of the company can be critically intertwined. The excellence of translation on the Human Initiative website is imperative as it directly impacts its acceptability, accuracy, and readability, aligning with the principles discussed in translation theory. Ensuring accuracy in conveying the intended message, adhering to cultural and linguistic norms for acceptability, and maintaining readability for user comprehension are paramount for creating a positive user experience and enhancing the brand image on the website.

Declarative sentence is the sentence type that is the straightest forward. It can string the subject at the beginning of a sentence and then place the predictor at the end, followed by an indirect object, direct object, or other element as needed. Declarative sentence, the most common type, commonly make a statement (Haryono & Bryan, 2008: 384). Generally speaking, these sentences are used to communicate ideas clearly and concisely, for example "I don't live in the town". The most basic type of sentence is the declarative one. It conveys information and is punctuated with a period, according to Cummings (2018). Declarative sentences can therefore be found in any sentence as long as they serve the fundamental purpose of providing information, with the Human Initiative website as a research object. Researcher opt for declarative sentences because they offer access to a substantial dataset for assessing translation quality. This choice is facilitated by the abundance of narrative lines on the website, which contain statements, facts, and opinions. For instance, the sentence "Children are the future" exemplifies this structure. This approach enables researchers to conduct a thorough analysis, gaining a nuanced understanding of translation quality within the website's context. Focusing on declarative sentences allows for a concentrated examination of accuracy, acceptability, and readability in a specific context.

Researcher have found several previous researches that discuss translation quality with different objects. The first relevant research is "An Analysis of Declarative and Interrogative Sentences in 'Don't Look Up' Movie", the authors of the research article are Agustinus Fransiskus, Widi Syahtia Pane, and Godefridus Bali Geroda (2023). The aim of the research article is to analyze declarative and interrogative sentences in the movie "Don't Look Up" and explore their deep structure. The method used in the study is qualitative research with content analysis as its approach. The researcher used a table as a research instrument to collect the data and the data analysis techniques included data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing. Triangulation was also applied to ensure data validity. The second research is "A Syntactic Analysis On Sentences Found in "Go Diego Go" Eps. The Arctic Rescue", the author of this research is Isna Fahimatul Kaefiyah (2015). The aim of the study is to analyze sentence structures in "Go Diego Go" Eps. The Arctic Rescue through tree diagram analysis. The method used in collecting the data is the Simak Bebas Libat Cakap (SLBC) method, followed by note-taking techniques for further analysis. The data collection technique involved watching the DVD of "Go Diego Go" series and manually writing down the subtitles of the conversations. The data were then segmented into sentences and analyzed for sentence types based on the number of clauses and their syntactic properties. The data analysis techniques included identifying sentence types, portraying declarative and interrogative sentences in tree diagrams, and analyzing the sentences for their syntactic properties. The analysis of sentences in "Go Diego Go" Eps. The Arctic Rescue revealed a variety of sentence types.

The third research is "The Syntax Analysis on Declarative Sentence in Ann Jungman's Lucy Keep the Wolf from the Door", by Uswatun Khasanah (2016). accurately, and factually describing the language structure. The researcher used two methods for data collection: documentation method and observation method. Documentation method involved using books, notes, novels, and newspapers to collect data. Observation method included reading the novel to find declarative sentences. Data Analysis Techniques: the researcher used the description method for data analysis. Steps involved in data analysis included describing sentence structures, classifying data based on sentence types, and analyzing sentence structures using tree diagrams. The final steps included drawing conclusions and writing a report based on the analysis.

Based on those previous research, it can be said that those researches have different study focuses and objects in this research. Based on the pre-observation of the researcher, it is known that most of the problems are related to accuracy, acceptability, and readability. Although there are some similarities found related to the declarative sentence and the quality of translation, none of them discussed the whole package of translation quality; accuracy, acceptability, and readability. It means this study provides new information regarding the translation quality; accuracy, acceptability, and readability of the website company. According to the explanation above, this research aims to analysis the translation quality of the human initiative website.

1.2 Statement of the Problem

The problem formulations of this research are as follows.

1. What types of declarative sentences are found in the Human Initiative website?
2. How is the analysis of translation qualities of declarative sentences in the Human Initiative website?

1.3 Objectives of the Research

The objectives of this research are as follows.

1. To identify the types of declarative sentences of the Human Initiative website.
2. To analyze the translation qualities of declarative sentences of the Human Initiative website.

1.4 Limitations of the Research

The limitation of the study is related to the types of declarative sentences and three programs of the Human Initiative website (<https://human-initiative.org/>) and their related publications (2023), namely a) child protection programs, b) empowerment programs, c) disaster management and emergency response. The researcher chooses those programs because three of them are the main programs. The assessment of translation qualities in the aspects of accuracy, readability, and acceptability will be analyzed by theory of Nababan (2012).

CHAPTER V CLOSING

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the research findings and discussions conducted on the declarative sentences in three programs and their publications on the Human Initiative Website, as well as the translation qualities, the following conclusions can be drawn:

1. In the analysis of translation findings for declarative sentences on the Human Initiative website, it was found that there are four types of declarative sentences: simple sentence, compound sentence, complex sentence, and compound-complex sentence. Among these four types, simple sentences were found the most, followed by complex sentences, compound sentences, and compound-complex sentences.
2. The translation of the declarative sentences on the human initiative website is mostly accurate. The translated message is conveyed precisely and has equivalent meaning in the target language. This shows that there is several losses of information or distortion of meaning from the source language to the target language. The translation is able to capture the essence of the original message very well, ensuring that all important details are conveyed correctly. The aspect is acceptability, translation is considered acceptable because it feels natural; the technical terms used are commonly used and familiar to the reader. High acceptability indicates that the translation follows the norms and standards of the target language, but there is only one data that has less acceptable because it feels no natural when translated into TL. This reflects that the readers do not find anything awkward or strange in the use of language and terms used, so they feel comfortable while reading. Translations have high readability; readers can easily understand the translated words, terms, phrases, clauses and sentences. High readability ensures that the translated text is easily understood by the target audience. The sentence structure and word choice are well adjusted so that the reader does not struggle to understand the information conveyed, increasing the effectiveness of communication.

5.2 Suggestion

According to the results of this research, here is the suggestion that can be considered by any related parties, especially for:

1. The future researcher

The human initiative website is an interesting object for further research. This research only discusses the declarative sentence and quality of translation from the accuracy, acceptability, and readability. Therefore, future researchers can explore it to enhance the results of this study or delve into different areas, including to analyze the translation shift, techniques, or other relevant issues. Future research may also analyze the other kind of terms from different linguistic units which is in accordance with a website that will be the media of research.

2. The website organizer

In publishing translated works, it is advisable for the website organizer to be more stringent in selecting translators who are truly competent in translating Indonesian into English to avoid misunderstandings in conveying the intended message by the original author. The role of translation editors is also crucial and should be given more attention to ensure that the resulting translation is accurate, acceptable, and readable so that it can be easily understood by the readers.
